

BLAME THE DEAD BRUNO TALKS Reveals His Defense

HANDWRITING, RANSOM STORY BARED IN INTERVIEW

By DOROTHY KILGALLAN

International News Service Special Correspondent

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 22.—Blame the dead man, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, when he takes the stand tomorrow to deny his part in the crime of the century, will lay the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby in the hands of dead Isidor Fisch, the man who can't talk back.

He will try to refute the state's strongest evidence against him—the handwriting specimens—with the hypothetical specter of his friend's hand penning the Lindbergh ransom notes.

He will say that on the night of March 1, 1932, at the hour of the kidnaping, he was at home with his wife.

Here are the prosecution's three most damning points against Hauptmann: the handwriting, the identification, the possession of the ransom money.

Bruno's Answer

And these are his answers, as he will give them on the witness stand, as he gave them exclusively to the Evening Journal through defense counsel.

"I did not write those letters to Colonel Lindbergh. I never saw him in my life until that day I was on the witness stand in the Bronx, when they showed them to me."

"I told the truth when I said I didn't write them. I'm telling the truth now."

"But they look like my handwriting, and experts have testified they were written by someone who wanted to double-cross me. Who wanted me to get the blame of this thing I didn't do."

"I don't know. I can't prove it. It could have been him, I know."

"Do you think he could have copied your handwriting in all those letters?"

"Sure, He Could"

Hauptmann answered: "Sure, he could have."

"He had samples of my handwriting, many of them. Why, I could not tell you how many. I wrote him letters. We had business transactions together."

"In our dealings I sometimes wrote out statements and these I gave to Fisch. He had plenty of stuff to work on if he wanted to copy my writing."

"The childless former machine gunner walked his cell like a cat. He is like and fast and moves quietly as a leopard moves through a jungle. His face is made of blunted angles.

His eyes are a blue you cannot look into without blinking. Today he is tense with expectation, like a prize fighter before the bell; he cannot wait to get in that witness chair, he has been so long without writing."

He said: "Wait till I take the stand—wait till I tell my story. Let them listen to me for a while."

On the state's second point—the identifications—Hauptmann's answer will be chiefly a denial, except in the instance of the latest person to identify him, Mrs. Cecile M. Barr. Hauptmann will offer proof that she lied.

On Ransom Money

So he dismisses the identifications. Then—the ransom money, the big question mark in the defense case that Bruno Hauptmann will have to answer.

Hauptmann declared: "Fisch gave me the money. I put it away for him. I didn't know it was Lindbergh ransom money. It was in a shoe box when he gave it to me."

"When I found out what it was I hid it in safer places. I spent only what Fisch owed me."

"The money that I put in the brokerage account was not Fisch's money or Lindbergh ransom money. It was my own, that my wife and I had saved."

"The state proved yesterday that it was not $50,000 as they claim. When it was all over they only accounted for $10,000."

And when he has told this story the stand, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, talking under the spotlight of the whole world's eyes, will answer the question is asking: Where were you on the night of March 1, 1932, between 8 and 10 o'clock?"

"This is his answer: 'I was at home. My wife was with me. She remembers, and that is what she will tell on the stand. I wasn't in Hopewell. I wasn't anywhere in New Jersey. I was in my own home.'"

"I didn't make it." "The baby's sleeping suit?" "I never saw it until they showed it to me."

That's his story.

'Ransom Bill in Her Face'

HARRIET BARR MRS. CECILE BARR
"Positively" identifying Bruno Richard Hauptmann as the man who gave her a $5 Lindbergh ransom bill, Mrs. Cecile Barr, above, Greenwich village movie cashier, testified that she remembered Hauptmann because of his rude manner in waving up the money and flinging it in her face. EAST BOSTON

Woman Stabbed

Screaming that she had been stabbed, Mrs. Electra Frustalia, 55, of 214 Ave. street, East Boston, ran into East Boston Relief Hospital today.

Blood poured from wounds in her face, neck and back. She was rushed to the operating room. Doctors said she would recover.

Police are searching for her husband. Mrs. Frustalia, doctors said, told them they had been separated for some time.

KAMINSKI

Seeks New Trial

Springfield, Jan. 22.—A new trial in superior court was asked today for Alexander Kaminski, who was saved from execution for the murder of a prison guard on a 30-day reprieve.

Defense attorney Edward L. Weston will seek to have the death sentence changed to a maximum of life imprisonment.

FRUGAL, SAVED THOUSANDS

That's Answer on Money, Says Mrs. Hauptmann

By JEANETTE SMITS

International News Service Special Correspondent
Flemington, N. J., Jan. 22.—They both worked very hard. They lived frugally—even meagerly, according to American standards.

And every cent they had in excess of daily expenses went straight into the bank account.

That is why, said Mrs. Anna Hauptmann today, she and her husband were able to save thousands during their marriage. She insisted incredulously:

"People seem to be so surprised. They look at those figures and wonder how we could have $1000 or $2000 in a year."

"Every cent Richard and I had we earned honestly. We were both brought up in Germany, where everybody saves money. We did not spend much, and everything we had left over we put away in the bank."

"It is so simple—I do not understand why anybody should be puzzled."

Her voice was soft, and her sincere, heavy-lidded eyes gleamed as she recalled that the first $100 Richard gathered together after he came to this country he sent directly to his mother in Germany. She insisted incredulously:

"Richard was so glad he could give her that money. He was so happy about it. He was a wonderful son, as well as a wonderful husband."

Their standards of living were both simple and wholesome—never expensive, she revealed.

"We could go to the movies a little, but not often. The neighborhood houses there in the Bronx do not cost much. What is it? Maybe 30 cents each."

"We went to a little beer garden, occasionally, and the beer wouldn't be more than 10 cents a glass."

"I remember how horrified I was when he started going to those places in Yorkville. Maybe he would spend as much as $2.00 in an evening. That seemed so much to me."

"I thought it would be better to put the money in the bank."

She pointed out that until 1932, both were working. Richard averaged $50 a week. She earned $18 as a waitress and the tips would bring her income to $27 or $28.

In "good times," she said, she could live on the tips alone. Mrs. Hauptmann added:

"They make so much of the fact that Richard stopped working in 1932. What could be wrong with that?"

"He was making money in the stock market—more than he could make at his own job. Why should he work as a carpenter?"

Their trips, which seemed so luxurious actually were exceedingly inexpensive, she revealed.

"We went to Florida for three weeks in the car, and the whole thing cost only $100. How could you get a nice vacation much cheaper than that?"

Though she contributed to the family income, she did not follow Richard's involved manipulations in the market, she said.

"I could never understand them—all this buying and selling and buying again. A few times I would call for him at the brokerage place and I would watch those figures on that board, without knowing what they meant."

WITNESS SA BRUNO TWICE

WITHIN TEN DAYS OF KIDNAPING

New York police department was recalled by the state.

Attorney-General Wiggins questioned Finn about the 15 Lindbergh ransom bill which Mrs. Cecilia Barr, cashier at Lovers' Lane in Greenwich Village, yesterday testified Hauptmann passed at her window on the night of November 28, 1933.

Finn and he received the bill on the following day at the Corn Exchange Bank, New York city.

He testified he took the bill to Mrs. Barr and questioned her about it. Finn was at that time tracing the Lindbergh ransom money.

Finn identified the bill when Wiggins produced it. He was then exposed.

Mrs. Elsie Whately, wife of the dead Lindbergh father, Gills Whately, was recalled. She was asked to verify Betty Gow's story concerning the finding of the Lindbergh baby's thumb guard.

"We were taking a walk that day," Mrs. Whately said. "We walked down the stairs from the house to the main road, on the way back we both saw the thumb guard lying there and Mrs. Gow picked it up."

"Q—How long was that road from the Lindbergh house to the gate?" A—Nearly a mile.

"Q—How wide is the path, is it 12 feet?" A—Yes.

The defense chief then sought to bring out how heavy the traffic was over that road during the time the thumbguard reportedly had been discovered.

He took the witness over the details of her story on the finding of the thumbguard by Betty Gow.

Mrs. Whately identified the thumb guard which had been attached to the baby's sleeping suit the last night it was put in bed in the crib.

"Q—By Wiggins—On the night of March 1, 1935, was the room in which you and Miss Gow visited together upstairs lighted all the time?" A—It was. I switched the light out when I left the room.

Mrs. Whately identified the black suitcase that has been in court for more than 10 days.

"Q—Is this the suitcase that was below the window in the baby's nursery on March 1, 1935?" A—It is.

Using a small plan of the nursery, Wiggins had the witness point out where the suitcase was in the nursery.

Cross-examined by Reilly concerning the lights in the house the night of the kidnapping, Mrs. Whately said:

"I went upstairs about nine p. m. The lower floor was well lighted."

"Q—Do you remember the day on which you found the thumb guard?" A—It was about March 25.

"Q—It was rainy and muddy that month, wasn't it?" A—Yes.

"Q—Now wasn't this mud guard?"—laughter breaks out among spectators at Reilly's slip of the tongue and Justice Trechard angrily rapped for order.

Mrs. Whately said the weather that month was "typical March weather"—freezing and thawing throughout the month.

She admitted many persons had been in the vicinity between the time the thumb guard was found by Betty Gow. They included reporters, photographers, police and police officials.

Asked who saw the thumb guard she said:

"We both saw it together."

Miss Gow, however, picked it up. "That's all," she said Reilly.

More Hauptmann trial testimony in later editions.

HARRIMAN SEES Depression End

Pittsburgh, Jan. 22 (IN)—Near the end of its "depression cycle," business in improving in most of the country, according to Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Harriman said major depression is through a six-year cycle, beginning with three years of declining activity. The demand for worn out commodities then revives, he pointed out, and is followed by a revival of demand for heavier goods.

Days when the British General Gough refused to allow American boys to coast on Boston Common are being brought to mind in Quincy.

These 12,000 school children, with their parents, are seeking aid from the city council to allow coasting, now banned on all Quincy streets.

City Councilman Edward Carson today said he would ask for a review of the city ordinances to determine if coasting should be allowed.

THOMAS JOINS FOES OF WORLD COURT

Reilly in the national review law recently held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

While Thomas was declaring against the Court, Senator Adams (D) of Colorado, announced he would vote for adherence, saying:

"I am for the Court, but not for the world court. I think it is a move for world peace and we ought to try it. But I wouldn't want to underwrite the consequences."

Senator Thomas held an entirely different opinion.

"I'm against the Court now. I favored American adherence to it in 1920."

"It is a different Court now. Now the nations of the world are against us economically, financially, commercially and nationally. Many of them owe us repudiated debts. Some of them owe us. Others regard us as an overgrown child, who doesn't know his own mind."

"I look upon American entry into the World Court at this time as comparable to an honest man entering a den of thieves. I believe we would come out of it dirtied and scared."

"The psychology of it is wrong. Not a single good purpose would be served by going into the Court. And I am surprised that the administration has not brought forth this controversial issue at a time when our country is in its present plight."

The counter-attack was credited to the radio attack on the Court Sunday by the Rev. Charles Coughlin, Detroit "radio" priest.

An administration leader reported his poll disclosed 60 senators favor adherence, six more "leaned" way, with 34 cast adherence, with four more "leaning away from the court." He had no check on the six absent senators.

WEISS BODY FOUND IN CREEK

By Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 22—The body of William Weiss, kidnapped and slain night life character, was recovered today from Neshaminy of Robert Malt's notorious "Tristate" club.

The body of the reputed victim of Robert Malt's notorious "Tristate" gang was found near the spot to which authorities were directed by a member of the band yesterday.

The discovery ends a three-month hunt for the reported wealthy man who was "snatched" by three men as he drove up to his suburban home one evening last October.

WINDOW THIEVES

Window thieves buried rocks through plate glass in two downtown stores early today, stealing a woman's fur coat valued at $250 from one window and a man's overcoat valued at $40 from the other.

The man's coat was snatched from the window of the Bond Clothing company at Washington and Essex streets. An hour later the woman's coat was stolen from the window of Chandler & Company on Tremont street.

GIRL TARRED By Masked Gang

Elliot, W. Va., Jan. 22 (IN)—Six masked men broke into the county jail here today, seized Peter Elms, 55, and Sylvia Tinsler, a 19-year-old girl, and, after walking them a half-mile out of town in freezing weather, and beat both and applied tar and feathers.

Wrapped in blankets taken them by the hand, the man and girl were taken to town. Elms and Miss Tinsler were serving sentences for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

'JAFSIE' PHONOGRAPH TO BE PLAYED

By Associated Press.

Flimington, N. J., Jan. 22—The possibility of two spectacular aspects in Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defense developed today.

If he can obtain from the Department of Justice the cast of a footprint noted by official investigators in the cemetery where Colonel Lindbergh had ransom paid, Edward J. Reilly proposes to show when Hauptmann is on the stand that the cast does not fit either of Hauptmann's feet.

With the Department of Justice stating it will make available photograph record of the conversation "Jafsie" had in the cemetery with the ransom receiver—a record in which "Jafsie" implied the other voice, Reilly said he will have it played in court, evidently to let the jury judge as to the merits of Jafsie's identification of Hauptmann.

Flimington, N. J., Jan. 22 (IN)—Edward J. Reilly, chief counsel for the defense at the Hauptmann trial, this afternoon sent a telegram to Attorney General Cummings in Washington asking for the report on the cast of a footprint taken in St. Raymond's cemetery, the Bronx.

BRUN HITS ERA HEAD HERE

By Associated Press.

Washington, Jan. 22—Mayor James J. Bruin of Lowell, Mass., asserted today at a conference with relief officials that the state administrator in Massachusetts had discriminated against his city in the allotment in FEERA funds.

Bruin said he told the relief heads that Administrator Reiche was giving far more money to other cities whose needs were far less than those of Lowell.

"Why our allotment for January was only $115,000," he said. "When the state was receiving around $3,000,000 a month, we were obtaining about $100,000."

"Since then, the state's allotment has been doubled, while our increase has been less than $25,000."

OLD AGE

1680 Million
NEEDED

FUND BASED ON $40 A MONTH

By Associated Press
Washington, Jan. 22.—The Senate Finance Committee was told today by Senator Wagner (D-N.Y.) at hearings on the Administration's social security program, that $1,680,000,000 a year is needed immediately to care for the nation's dependent aged on the basis of $40 a month.

Wagner, author of the Senate's Social Security Bill, was the first Finance Committee witness.

Across the broad Capitol plaza, the House ways and means committee also gathered to continue consideration of the administration's omnibus plan for old-age pensions, unemployment insurance and other social aids.

The New York senator said that though his bill provides for a minimum old age pension of $20 a month, "there is no reason to suppose" that this will be the limit of aid to the aged.

There is nothing in the proposed law, he said, to limit the pension to $20 a month, and furthermore, the federal administrator may "refuse assistance to any state which does not go as far beyond the $20 level as is necessary to provide health and decency pensions to all its needy citizens."

Wagner, a foreign born senator who has specialized in social legislation, told the committee President Roosevelt's program for economic security was "the beginning rather than the end of an era," and marked the "rebirth of that idealism and love for social justice which is uniquely American."

CURLEY

To Talk on FINANCE

STATE'S ASSETS
TO BE AIRED

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Governor Curley tonight will speak on the "State of the State's Finances" at 6:15 o'clock over station WBZ-WBZA.

In budget conversations, the governor has disclosed that $1,700,000 of state money in closed banks has been carried as an asset on the books.

The state will be lucky if it ultimately gets 40 cents, he said, and a reported surplus sent by the last administration of $500,000 in reality is a deficit of $1,000,000, he asserts.

An Open Parley

On next Thursday a conference between the governor and public utility representatives will be held at the press, the governor said.

The purpose of the parley is to determine if gas and electric companies will voluntarily reduce rates. Bills hostile to gas and electric companies are before the Legislature, and the Governor's own in-sular recommendation points to lower schedules.

Asked if the conference would be held at the Governor's residence, he said: "It's public business. The companies must have a private one, but I can see no objection to throwing it open to the public."

At a date to be determined this week, the Governor said the price of milk in the Boston area will be reduced by the state milk control board.

Federal authorities, he said, are content with present prices, but a movement is on to increase the price to the farmer from 7 to 7 1/2 cents.

The price to the consumer, in the opinion of some of the producers, should be boosted to make up for the increase.

WELFARE ROLLS Add 158 Cases

Boston's public welfare rolls have swelled by the addition of 158 cases during the last week, according to figures released by the bureau of the department.

The number of cases on the list this year exceed by 1250 those listed at the same time last year.

Expenses have jumped to a total of $239,521.70 during the past week, which is an increase of $5000.

Look Over Ballots

The House committee on elections will tonight examine a handwriting expert to scrutinize ballots cast in the Fall for the contest for representative between J. Dolan Hathaway and Cyrus Rounsaville, it was announced today.

QUINCY HOUSE
Has Daily Blaze

Three fires in three days at the record established by workmen engaged in wrecking the old Quincy house at Battle square. On each occasion firemen responded to the alarm, found the blaze had originated in a fire built by the men for warming their hands. No damage was done.

CONNERY TODAY

Warns NRA ON SHOES

DEMANDS CODE BE REOPENED

By Associated Press
Washington, Jan. 22.—The NRA was warned today by Chairman Connery of the House labor committee that he would demand a thorough investigation of the boot and shoe code if prompt reopening and revision of it were not forthcoming.

Connery's ultimatum was delivered at an NRA hearing, at which were gathered mayors, members of Congress, manufacturers, shoe workers and civic groups.

They gathered to appeal for relief from conditions under the code which they said had resulted in wholesale migrations of shoe plants from the highly unionized cities of eastern Massachusetts.

Connery said he also intended to file in the House a bill providing for equal representation of labor on the code authorities.

"Had labor been given equal representation at the outset," Connery said, "much of this trouble would have been avoided."

Connery said when his bill was referred to the labor committee he planned at the subsequent hearings to go deeply into the general administration of the code authorities.

"As long ago as last March," Connery said, "during hearings on my 30-hour week bill, complaints were made of conditions under the shoe code, and I demanded a re-opening at that time. No results were accomplished, and I want to make it plain right here now that if this hearing is solely for the purpose of allowing mayors, congressmen and others to let off steam, I intend to make a thorough investigation through my committee (the House labor committee) to see if I cannot get some action."

erment land, an inexhaustible bed of beautifully polished pebbles was found ready for the work.

Water will cover that deposit when the dam is filled, but it might be dredged for future work, when other dams are built higher up the river to use power generated above the Boulder level.

The amount of concrete in that job, according to the department of the Interior, would build a monument one hundred feet square, two and one-eighth miles in height. Men will build such monuments some day, and wider and higher, with apartments all the way up, allowing tenants to choose the climate and altitudes they want, with airplane landings on top. What men can imagine they can do.

Secretary of the Interior takes the public that the concrete used at Boulder Dam job would build "a standard 16-foot wide paved highway reaching from Miami in Florida to Seattle in Washington."

This country will build many such roads in the years to come now that Franklin D. Roosevelt has taught the people how to spend money, and sections of the roads at intervals will be wide enough for airplane landings, the national slogan, "Land your plane anywhere from the northwestern tip of Alaska to Key West."

Across the top of the dam, 45 feet wide, a paved highway for automobiles, will carry travelers from Nevada to Arizona, on the Arizona side a winding road will lead to the top of the canyon.

The dam forms an arch, reaching from wall to wall of the canyon, the outer curve, turned up stream, the arch holding the weight of the accumulated waters, in a reservoir "lake" reaching upstream 110 miles.

It is the height of the water back of the dam, not the volume accumulated upstream that creates pressure on the dam. You might put the whole Atlantic ocean upstream of the dam, and that dam, at the same height, as planned for the reservoir, and the dam would hold it. Kindhearted ladies and "optimists" like to tell things, will be glad to hear that the reservoir lake and all that Colorado river region belonging to Uncle Sam has been made a bird sanctuary. You may fish in the reservoir, but may not kill wild ducks or other birds that are expected to breed there. In millions, from Boulder Dam they will fly in all directions, and sportsmen will have the pleasure of killing them.

Boulder Dam is the highest dam in the world, towering 726 feet above bed rock, 110 to 130 feet below the river bed. The Boulder Dam, now building in France, comes next, 446 feet. Third is 405, Owyhee Dam in Oregon. The world's greatest dam is not really a "Boulder Dam," for it is built in Black Canyon. Boulder Canyon, farther up the river, would provide less storage for water; the dam would be wider there, more expensive. Also the walls of Boulder Canyon are of granite, not as strong for anchorage purposes as volcanic rock that is in the walls in Black Canyon on both sides.

Intense volcanic heat, applied in comparatively recent times, gives a tougher rock to Black Canyon walls.

On both sides of the canyon the wall of the dam is anchored in the canyon rock walls to a depth of 90 feet.

Across the canyon, from wall to wall, are stretched numerous cables, over which engineers, workmen and materials travel back and forth. Suspended below these cables are open swinging platforms, on which you stand as you cross the canyon four times with Mr. Crowe.

The platforms are strong enough to hold twenty tons but carrying you from one side to the other, six hundred feet above the canyon floor, swaying and dipping, they seem a little insecure, traveling twelve hundred feet a minute across to the Arizona side, and back.

Another trip leads to the bottom of the river bed, where you enter a round tunnel fifty feet in diameter cut in the rock to bring the water under six hundred feet of pressure to turbines that will produce electric power equal to the strength of one million eight hundred round horses.

Pseudo-economists recently were prattling about "thoeracy." Well meaning, silly gentlemen that, now do away with machinery and go back to "hand labor," should visit Boulder Dam.

The wall of the dam alone contains more cubic yards of masonry than would be needed to reproduce the great pyramids of Egypt. And it would take the men that have been employed on this dam, working with old Egyptian methods, at least one thousand years to finish the concrete wall of the dam alone, to say nothing of double tunnels through the solid rock on either side of the canyon, and all the steel and machinery that ancient methods could not have produced at all.

What this country wants is not men working with pick and shovel, but more and more highly productive machinery, the plus means enough to distribute that which is produced.

The wall of the dam weighs six million six hundred thousand tons, and pressure of the water against the cement wall at the base of the dam will be forty five thousand pounds to the square foot. The concrete wall more than six hundred feet thick will hold that easily. Chemical action caused by the "setting" of the cement, plus intense pressure, raises the wall to a temperature of one hundred and fifty degrees.

This is overcome by circulating water just above the freezing point through the cement in five hundred and seventy miles of one inch steel tubing. The water is artificially cooled, and it takes the cement about two years to cool off.

The wall of the dam is not reinforced, but thirty five million pounds of reinforced bars and rails will be used, all supplied by "United States Steel" which for this job has provided materials of unusually strong quality. The "Bureau of Standards" inspects everything.

The dam which goes from one hundred and ten to one hundred and thirty feet into the rock below the river bed will raise the level of the river back of the dam five hundred and eighty-four feet, and will be eleven hundred and eighty feet wide at the top.

The government purchases all materials, contractors supplying the labor and mechanical equipment, including trucks that carry fifty tons.

The reservoir back of the dam will hold thirty million five hundred thousand acres feet of water, enough to cover thirty million five hundred thousand acres one foot deep.

That amount of water would cover the state of New York to a depth of one foot, which means ten trillion gallons of water, eighty thousand gallons for each person in the United States, five thousand gallons for every inhabitant of the earth.

The average flow of the river would fill the reservoir in two years, and water for power, irrigation can be used before the reservoir is full.

Gigantic emergency spillways on both sides of the canyon in addition to the huge diversion tunnels through the canyon rock walls, will provide for any possible flood or sudden rise in the river. The spillways are arranged to take care of five hundred and twenty-five thousand cubic feet of water per second.

The Colorado river is now controlled, and docile. There will be no more floods in the Imperial valley, but instead regular supply of water and power as may be needed. Spillways and other outlets with their capacity of five hundred and twenty-five thousand cubic feet of water per second, would carry water enough to develop twenty-five million horsepower.

Any one of the numerous spillways would take care of all the water that flows over Niagara Falls and the power-developing drop would be three times as great, as at Niagara.

All other water powers on earth are small compared with this giant power-producing dam. The next greatest power plant in the world, the Dnieprostroy, Russian plant, develops only seven hundred and fifty thousand horsepower against Boulder Dam's one million and eight hundred and thirty-three thousand horsepower. That energy means four thousand three hundred and thirty million kilowatt hours of power per year.

The new Ford V-8

WHAT is there about the new Ford V-8 that is making it a high point of interest at the Automobile Show?

Your question will turn into an exclamation of surprise when you see this new automobile for yourself.

Here is a car—low in price, economical to run, and yet built to meet every modern motoring need.

It meets the demand for style—with streamlined bodies and new interior finish. For roominess—with wider seats, front and rear. Large luggage compartments.

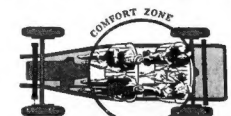

It gives you the handling ease you need today. Easier to steer and park. It has stability at all speeds. The new with Comfort Zone Riding and dozens of other new features...

brakes and clutch operate with extremely light foot pressure.

But your greatest surprise will be the new Comfort Zone Ride. See the diagram. Now even back seat passengers get "front seat riding comfort!"

It offers you 8 other new improvements—in addition to the 100 improvements of the proved 85-horsepower V-8 engine and other Ford features. It is not surprising that this new Ford is already making automobile history.

NOTE how the springs are placed not beyond the front and rear axles. They provide a long spring for riding ease and reduce the 115-inch wheelbase for handling ease. Both front and rear axles are created between the springs—ensuring all passengers a ride in the Comfort Zone.

LOVE DENIED

KENT MARRIES
CORA WITH REGRETS

By Louise Long and
Ethel Doherty

SYNOPSIS

Start Pennington, struggling young artist, loves Sharlene Stanning, wealthy society girl, but cannot ask her to marry him and share his poverty.

Moreover, he knows Sharlene considers him just her best friend. Julie Devere, Stanning's sister, is jealous of society girl and will do anything for Stanning's love, but she means little to him.

When Sharlene returns from abroad with the news that she is engaged to Kent Damsell, millionaire playboy, Stanning's dream crumbles. He is, however, favorably impressed with Kent, and realises his rival is of Sharlene's world.

Five days before his wedding, Kent receives a long distance phone call from his brother, in New York, informing him that a girl named Cora, had shot herself upon reading of Kent's engagement, and her dying request is to be married.

He phones Sharlene that business requires his presence in New York and leaves by plane.

Chapter IX

Kent lost track of the hours. His connections were miraculous. Part of him recognized this and approved the work of the pilots. . . . But Cora would not let him alone for long. Ten years of Cora, good except though she was, had grown deadly treacherous.

He had loved her, of course, when she had left her husband and baby and come to him. But it didn't last. Cora was a flame—but a flame—like Sharlene. . . . He had got so bored, the last few years, so unutterably tired. She had had and had had him free—reasonably free—until she said, "Oh, Lord, could I keep it up to the paper?"

She had said that with a look at the airport to meet him that he knew directly it was Kent's life.

"She's still living," Leigh said, as he sat in his brother's bag, "but it won't be long now." He buried Kent into a waiting taxi, and as they raced forward, he said, "She's kept herself alive by the work she's done—just to keep it up."

"Anything broken in the papers?"

Secret Guarded

"But, but it may cost a lot of dough."

"That's all right," Kent said briskly, "I expect to have to pay. The main thing is, Sharlene doesn't know about this. I don't want her to know there ever was a Cora."

"Oh, come now, she wouldn't guess that you are so immature."

"That isn't it. There's something new and fresh and charming. I won't have it tarnished by her."

Cora looked like something dragged out of the river. Her dark hair hung in dank waves about her greenish face. She opened her enormous pale eyes and looked at Kent.

"I love you—darling," she whispered hoarsely.

"Yes, Cora."

"I'm going to die."

"Do something for me?"

"Of course, Cora. What is it?"

"Marry me."

"But, Cora, I can't do that. I'm going to die."

"Give me your name."

"That's all."

Leigh turned from the window and exchanged glances with his brother. Then he came over to the bedside.

"Look here, Cora. The doctor's not sure that you're not going to get well. It wouldn't be fair to Kent, or the young lady who's going to marry, if he married you."

"I won't do it, Leigh," Kent said. "I will not jeopardize Sharlene's happiness. I haven't the right to."

"Leigh, shush. Couldn't you hush-poo this? . . . and let the poor thing die happy?"

"I never lived to it, couldn't."

NOT HARD to recognize the light motif in the center panel of this little crocheted pullover sweater—it's the Empire State building to the life! Under heavy suits and coats the pullover is ideal. do that. I'd rather just refuse."

"Well, now you've seen her, and you're going to rush straight back to the Coast?"

"I'll wait a little. The doctor says it's a matter of hours—minutes."

"A Good Sport"

The nurse opened the door of Cora's room. She'd called for you again, sir."

He had gathered strength in some mysterious way. Her eyes were fixed steadily on Kent as he bent over her.

"I've never whimpered—have I?"

"You were always a good sport."

"You like—a good sport. You're one yourself—are you?"

He was silent, staring down at her, battling her will silently.

"Kent, I'd never—have I left my baby—if you hadn't needed me?"

His mind flashed back through the years. He saw himself on his knees before Cora, his head in her lap. The beautiful young matron, the wife of the most fashionable surgeon in New York. Kent had begged her—pleasurably—come to him. He remembered how she had told her to the nurse, but he had begged her to leave her baby, but he had leaved her.

"Cora, I'll never get over losing my baby. You never made it up to me."

He felt suddenly very humble. Especially when you—didn't need it—any more."

"He had no words with which to extenuate himself."

"I made up my mind—to ask you to marry me—two weeks ago."

"But it was too late."

"Cora, I ask you, please, for sport's sake—be a good sport."

"Hah!" It was a sardonic sound which took all her breath away for a moment. "The role—doesn't suit me. Two weeks ago—I saw my son—"

"Are You Crazy?"

Her fictitious strength deserted. She went into a sinking spell and the nurse came forward with a stimulant. Kent joined her.

"If this girl of yours is a C. C.," she remembered how she had told her to the nurse, but he had begged her to leave her baby, but he had leaved her.

"Cora, I'll never get over losing my baby. You never made it up to me."

"Kent?" Cora was calling again weakly. She went back to the bed.

"It's no use, Kent—just on the threshold. . . . He's finding out soon—about me. . . . It's not fair—he should think his mother was bad."

"Cora!"

"Because I'm not—I've only been a good girl."

"Kent?" Cora lifted her head by some supernatural effort and started desperately into his eyes. "You can't refuse; and be—a good sport."

"All right," he surrendered.

suddenly. "I'll go and get a license."

The wedding was a fantastic thing. Strange mingling of the scent of disinfectants and orange blossoms. Cora had begged for orange blossoms. . . . Oh, Sharlene, Sharlene! . . . The clergyman addressing the bride: "I do solemnly swear that you shall love this man as long as you both shall live."

Coras' hoarse whisper, triumphant even in its dreadful weakness. "I will!"

A sacrament. Sharlene loved sacraments. Was this one? Oh, no, no!

Cora was going to receive. The last sacrament soon. . . . What was it all about? The stolid little clergyman resumed bing. "Where is the ring?" Kent had not remembered to get one. Cora, holding his hand, turned the heavy fraternity ring feebly on his finger. "I'd like to have a wedding ring," she said weakly. "Let's use this, Kent."

He knew how very familiar the ring was. With this ring, I thee wed. Finally the whole monstrous weird force was brought to an end with the clergyman's dry, half joyful together let no man put asunder."

GIVEN IN MARRIAGE

CHAPTER 248

RELUCTANTLY I followed Lillian across the room to the chair in which Edith Fairfax sat.

"I wouldn't ask you," Lillian muttered after her injunction to follow her because Edith was on the verge of a collapse, "but I don't know what crazy notion she might get if you went out of the house without speaking to her."

Edith did not speak until Lillian had stopped in front of her. Then, without changing her steady stare, she said in a curt, sing-song monotone: "If he does and you have come to tell me!"

She smiled as she spoke, and I expected her to slump against Harry Underwood in a swoon. But Lillian put out her hand and slapped Edith's cheek lightly, but with a certain stinging effectiveness, once, twice, three times.

"If you've got 'Edge' as she said, 'Dicky' is not dead. He's very much alive and in no danger, but he has to go to the hospital at once, and there's not any time to take any of his hysterics or a fainting fit."

"I'm not going to let Edith go. I'm going into hysterics," she said. "Why is Dicky going to the hospital, if he is in no danger?"

"He's got a bad cold, that's all. At that point myself," Harry Underwood said.

"If you'll give me your ears for two or three seconds, you will help to pass away this very purposefully withering glance at me."

"I'll tell you the words of one available or thereabouts, just why Dicky has to go to a hospital, and stay there for a day or two at the longest. In the first place they want to know whether the bullet grazed the redoubtable Mr. Underwood."

"Oh!" Edith exclaimed emotionally. "His drawing arm! Oh! 'Exactly.' Lillian retorted calmly. "In the second place, if the bullet did graze it, they want to find out just how much damage was done. But in either case, you may rest assured that Dicky's life is in no danger whatever."

"That shows how little you know about Dicky," Lillian said sharply. "Kindly remember that I have known him since he was a baby, and I know him better than you do. He's a very nice fellow, but he's a bit of a dandy. He's got a high place and a long jump for him."

Good Food Values in and Around Boston

DON'T MISS THIS OPPORTUNITY.

STOCK UP on canned foods this week, for you are stocking up on many of the essentials of a balanced diet which means health and vigor during these trying winter months. Also, by purchasing at this time, you will be saving on the food bills. Here are some of the excellent values—Delicious, tender golden ham, packed in Maine where the finest corn is grown, three No. 2 tins for 32c, usually 37c each; three No. 2 tins of tomato velouté on spinach, peas, string beans, peaches, pineapple and pears.

ARE YOUR KITCHEN towels always ready where and when they are needed? You accepted the latest way to save money by having a roll of white absorbent paper towels always handy? Two rolls containing 300 towels and a green handle to attach to the wall—50c. Regularly 50c.

IF YOU WANT VALUE, here it is. 32c worth for 50c. With every pound of oleomargarine, which can be used for cooking and table use, is offered free a platinum-bound, chip-proof glass. This margarine is dated for freshness and guaranteed to give the best baking results. Over tested recipes included with each pound.

IS YOUR SHOWER curtain a bit shabby? Freshen the appearance of the entire room with a new cleansable taffeta shower curtain. Comes in the ever-popular patterns—blue, orange, peach, green, maize, or pink. Only $2.45, usually $3.25. These cute temptingly, and we will send it on request to anyone writing to Martha Lee.

It is a good idea to buy the shoulder rack, or ribs in its original form, then ask the dealer to bone it and use the bones for the soup kettle.

MORE COOKING

It's well to remember in cooking boned roasts, that such a compact piece of meat will require longer to cook than the same weight of meat with the bones in. A rolled roast of 5 pounds will require 10 minutes per pound longer than a 5 pound rib with the bone left in. Feel chose which are often bit limp and difficult to handle may be handled in another way. Ask the dealer for several wooden skewers. Cut the meat free from the back bones and rib bones with a sharp slicing knife, roll up the meat and run the skewers through at intervals of one inch.

This gives a nice compact roll of fat fastened securely at every inch. Slice the roll between the skewers and you'll have perfect little round chops with a skewer handle in each. These are ready for broiling or broiling, and you'll have a nice bit of bone for your lunch-bone.

Try these recipes for boned meat.

BONED STUFFED SHOULDER OF VEAL

Have a shoulder of veal boned, leaving it open on two sides. With damp cloth stuff with a bread dressing made by combining 1 cup of melted butter with 1 cup of milk. Season with salt and pepper. Broil in a hot oven for 30 minutes to the pound.

GRILLED LAMB CHOPS WITH PEAS AND RACON

Remove bone from loin lamb chops with a sharp pointed paring knife. Wrap the long flank and end of meat around the chop and skewer in place with a toothpick. Place on a broiler rack and broil for 10-12 minutes, turning once. Place on a platter and garnish with a bit of mint jelly and a dot of butter on top. Season with salt and pepper. The twine were born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fifield of East Thompson on January 12.

'SPENCER DEAN'

Radio Actor Hurt

New York, Jan. 22 (INS)—Spencer Dean, radio actor, who is known professionally as "Spencer Dean," was in a serious condition today at St. Vincent's Hospital today, the victim of a hit and run driver.

Dean was crossing a street in Greenwich Village when he was struck by a car driven by a Negro. The impact hurt him across the street, where he was struck again by a taxi cab.

"I'm easy for her," Edith interrupted sullenly. "She doesn't love."

"Are you going to finish that sentence?" Lillian demanded. "I don't wonder if you shrink perceptibly from her peculiar sort of R. R. paralytic face and her menacing voice."

"I know when I am beaten—by the same being," she said slowly. "I give you my word, professional to prevent common custom—called by lack of this seasonal."

"Who's going with Dicky to the capital?"

starts at the table

How you feel and how you look depend largely on the foods you eat. The balanced menu provides the "bulk" to prevent common custom—called by lack of this seasonal.

Common constipation frequently causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Yet, in most cases, it can be alleviated—pleasantly and safely by eating a delicious cereal.

Kellogg's All-Bran is a natural food for individuals. It contains "bulk" in convenient and concentrated form. All-Bran also provides vitamins B and iron.

Isn't this money way better than taking patent medicine? Two tablespoons of All-Bran cereal, usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If relief is not obtained, see your doctor.

Serve All-Bran as a cereal, or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek, Mich.

Keep on the Sunny Side of Life

FIFIELD TWINS

Coming Right Along

Putnam, Ct., Jan. 22 (AP)—The fifth set of Fifield twins is improving steadily. The two boys each had gained one ounce during the past week and their progress is regarded as normal.

Edward weighs five pounds 14 ounces, while David weighs five pounds 14½ ounces.

The twins were born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fifield of East Thompson on January 12.

BACK IN 1908, when this photograph was taken, the market for automobiles was limited to the wealthy few. But in this day and age the automobile industry counts its prospects by the millions.

Publications of small circulation are all right as far as they go. But they are hopelessly inadequate to reach the market of 20,000,000 car owners or to sell the more than 2,000,000 new cars planned for 1935.

To do a real job, the progressive automobile manufacturer requires a magazine that is geared up to the times, a magazine that not only reaches the blue blood market, but the great rank and file of the people as well.

To appeal to the greatest possible number of buyers at the lowest cost per buyer, the sensible automobile manufacturer must advertise regularly in The American Weekly.

Here is a magazine which is edited to please the reading desires of more than five and one-half million families who live in the richest buying areas of the nation.

The American Weekly concentrates and dominates in those twenty-five richest states in which 75% of all automobile sales are made.

For $16,000 you can buy a full page, more than double the size of any other magazine page and place it before these buyers at a cost of less than 1/4 cent per family.

Here is a market big enough and rich enough to take America's entire motor car output for 1935.

Where this Magazine goes

The American Weekly is the largest magazine in the world. It is distributed through 17 great Hearst Sunday Newspapers. In 597 of America's 995 towns and cities of 10,000 population and over, The American Weekly concentrates 67% of its circulation.

In each of 134 cities, it reaches one out of every two families
In 125 more cities, 40 to 50% of the families
In an additional 165 cities, 30 to 40%
In another 173 cities, 20 to 30%

... and, in addition, more than 1,885,000 families in thousands of other communities, large and small, regularly buy and read The American Weekly.

Where can you spend your advertising dollar more effectively?

CLARK HEARS CHARGES IN NEW YORK COURT

Nelson B. Clark, standing at right beside a deputy, is being arraigned in a New York court following his arrest after four youths killed a policeman in a holdup attempt.

Clerk Says Clark Bought Death Guns

Thomas Gifford, also known as "Red" Gifford, another of the youths slain, Clark himself mentioned the police belief in this respect, but would not discuss it.
The former Bay State probate clerk candidate was questioned for hours last night about his visit to the store where the pistols were purchased. Authorities said that one of the two guns killed Patrolman Killian.
Clark was also interviewed by Detectives Arthur Terman and John Connell of Boston police headquarters. They sought to connect the four New York suspects with the slaying of John J. Moran, in Boston's South End, last fall.
Clark asserted that there was no truth in the police declaration that he planned to go to Miami with the slayer of John J. Moran, in Boston's South End, last fall.
Clark asserted that there was no truth in the police declaration that he planned to go to Miami with the slayer of John J. Moran, in Boston's South End, last fall.

"Clark was going to drive me to Boston where I expected to get a new start in life. I had planned a little business of my own and was going to see an old and dear friend."
"His name is Clayton Hawridge and he lives in New Hill road, Jamaica Plain. He has a brother a banker. I expected to obtain a $500 loan from him."

"What would you have done then?"
"I was going to start that little business I planned and state a company. The way I'm in is only a temporary affair. I'm down now, but I'm just always going to be."

Questions Writer
"I was on top of the world a while ago with a million and half dollars. That was only temporary, too."
"You can take away every dollar from a man. To some men, money is their god. It never was mine. You can take my dollar, but you can't take away my personality, my intellect or my personality."
Clark learned that the reporter

NEW FORD RUING BRAKES ON KAPLAN 1935 FEATURE DELAYED

Equipped with an entirely new and more efficient braking system, due to the numerous complaints, the brake assembly of the new cars, the 1935 Ford V-8 made its appearance at the Boston Automobile Show this week.
The efficiency of the new brakes on the 1935 Ford V-8 has been increased between 50 and 60 per cent, according to "J. J. Conner," assistant manager of the Somerville branch of the Ford Motor Company.
This means the car driver has been provided with a much quicker "stop" and with less pedal pressure. It is required for the new Ford models. Better control of the car under all driving conditions has been assured by the many changes in construction.

Decisions in Rushmore Contest Due This Week

Judges Act

LAST OF TEXTS FACE TEST AT CAPITAL

By KENNETH M. ELLIS
Washington, Jan. 22.—Nearly a million Americans will focus anxious eyes on the Rushmore contest this week, where the national committee for the Mount Rushmore inscription competition have their eyes turned toward the three dozen or more texts which have survived the summer of sifting and resifting.
There were 848,705 of them to pass through the hands of the various regional committees and then the nearly 200 regional winners of awards by the Hearst newspapers have had to be read and re-read until this week the final selections are being made.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Senators Pittman of Nevada, Johnson of California, Cutting of New Mexico, Sheppard of Texas, McNamara of Oregon, Norcross of South Dakota, Bulow of South Dakota, Mr. Roosevelt, U. S. Representative Isabella, Greenway of Arizona, President J. G. Spruiell of the University of California, Fred W. Sargent, chairman of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission, are the members of the national committee.

Compare Choices
All this week the senators and other members of the committee will compare each other's choices of the two dozen remaining texts, written by all classes of Americans during the winter of 1934, in a nationwide competition sponsored by the Hearst newspapers, to secure a text to assist the commission in deciding what inscription the famous sculptor, Gutzon Borglum is to carve on the western slope of the Granite Mountain in Dakota's famous Black Hills. On the eastern slope are the colossal figures of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt.

"Fired Goodwin"
Clark said he was also in Worcester. He remarked that he was surprised last when James M. Curley defeated General Charles H. Coffey for the Democratic nomination for governor. He continued:

"How's Eddie (Curley) Logan doing over in South Boston now?"
"Oh, it's true all right. I never saw him. I know his brother, Mal, very well. Things were different three days. I remember when I saw Progressive state chairman and I saw Frank Goodwin out of a $500 a week job.
"Another time I had a deficit of $10,000 and I called Avon T. Fuller and some of the other boys to chip in $10,000 apiece."

"Clark was asked what he had to say about Frank J. Bartlett, former president of the Boston Tea Company and a member of the chemical company. His answer: 'He was the treasurer, but I never went to him or sent anyone to follow him in the stock of the company.'"

"De-Wo who were in the New York police showup and Captain Sullivan told you you ought to hang at the end of a rope because you were helping the four youths on the stand of the electric chair, how do you feel?"

"Oh, I just let it go in one ear and out another. It's just part of his job to shout at people. He likes to scare them. Compared to some of the things I've been called in my life that was mild."

Judge Jacob J. Kaplan's appeal from his ouster as chairman of the Boston Finance Commission by Governor Curley was not to be decided at last night's trial.

Justice Edward P. Pierce in Superior Court ruled no today when a writ of mandamus was sought to nullify the governor's designation of Justice Sullivan as chairman.

Justice Pierce accepted an agreed statement of fact from both sides but declined to rule immediately. He said he will decide Friday whether or not he will present the matter to the full bench.

Judge Kaplan, an appointee of former Governor Ely, was ousted from office after Governor Curley took office and designated Sullivan chairman.

Fred J. Madden, 28, of Batavia Street, Black Jack, was sentenced today to one year in the House of Correction for breaking and entering a Stuart Street girl's dormitory. Justice arrested Madden on the spot.

ARSENAL Fire Fought 6 HOURS

NAVY TO PROBE $20,000 LOSS

Investigation will be made by a naval board of inquiry into a fire at the United States naval ammunition depot at Hingham early today which destroyed more than $20,000 worth of silk bolts and bags, used in protecting powder from moisture.

The fire was discovered shortly after midnight by a United States marine on sentry duty, and the call out for the blaze was not sounded until nearly six hours later.

Use Gas Masks

Meanwhile the entire detachment of 40 marines at the munitions base, as well as the Hingham department, fought the stubborn blaze in Warehouse No. 3, using gas masks because of the thick, acrid smoke.
Spontaneous combustion was given as the cause of the fire, but the naval board of inquiry, in its investigation, probably tomorrow, will question all the marines and the 150 men of the department, who were employed at night.

Before the fire was extinguished, it was necessary for the marines to use gas masks. The fire department, which was called in, used the same masks and hoses from the long warehouse, which means that the fire was not discovered until it was well advanced.
According to Captain Purgon Green, U. S. N., in charge of the department, the fire was caused by the spontaneous combustion of the silk bolts and bags, which were stored in Warehouse No. 3.

Elks' "Hot Foot" Trial Postponed

Trial of an Elks' "hot foot" prank on Patrick F. "Pete" McCarron, 46-year-old secretary, was postponed a week today by Judge Duff in Municipal court.

Meanwhile, John J. McKenna, 34, of Boston, was charged with the prank on Patrick F. "Pete" McCarron, 46-year-old secretary, was postponed a week today by Judge Duff in Municipal court.

PROBE OF DOLE COAL EVERETT DEMAND

Investigation of the coal being sold out to welfare recipients in Everett was demanded today. City Councilman Edward M. Hogan, former president of the Council, called for the probe.

He declared that of every half-ton of coal delivered to families on welfare by the city, the companies doing business with the city would have been found to be "receiving."

Mayor Roche, the department of weights and measures and William J. Bickley, Jr., director of the welfare department, were asked to join the investigation.

Councilman Hogan: "If the investigation is not started by local authorities, I will go to the state department of weights and measures."

CURLEY ACTS TO SAVE STATE $37,000

Governor Curley made his first emergency move today when he decided that the state will not furnish the cost of the new law enforcement registration plates. The saving to the state will be $37,000.

The first 10,000 cars were equipped with them this year and former Governor Ely and Registrar Morgan T. Ryan had planned that all 1934 plates would be of the theft-proof type.

The Governor believes this to be a saving of $37,000 for the state by cutting down government costs and also making the plates more necessary to equip the workshop at state prison, where the plates are made, for the manufacture of the theft-proof plates. Only $5,000 of this has been spent.

CITY BLAMED IN ERA Cash Row

Answering charges that large sums of federal money had been turned to the ERA administration instead of being expended in Malden, Dr. Joseph W. Proctor, chairman of the Malden Welfare Board, and also Malden ERA administrator, has submitted a financial statement of activities.

PRIEST IN Movie Debate

Informal debate will be held Friday evening between Rev. Fr. Russell M. Sullivan, R. of Boston streets and Charles C. Pettibone, New York over the motion picture industry. It will be held in Washington Irving school, Roslindale, at the mid-winter meeting of the Longfellow Home and School Association.

Father Sullivan is the leader of the League of Decency in Greater Boston. Pettibone is general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

MYSTERY SHOT Kills Man

Lawrence, Jan. 22.—Nearly decapitated by a high-powered rifle bullet, an unidentified, well-dressed man was found dead in the wash room of the Central depot of the Boston Elevated Railway today.

Three yard workers calling their lunch outside the building heard the shot and found the body. A heavy rifle lay beside it.

JURY COMPLETE IN GIRGO KILLING

Five more jurors were accepted today in Middlesex superior court, completing the panel before which the case of the slaying of Luigi Girgo, 44, of Prince street, North End, one of the defendants.

The completed jury list: Fred N. Babson, foreman, of Newton; Daniel J. Maher, cylinder pressman, of Cambridge; Richard M. Moran, unemployed, of Somerville; Philip Hughes, laborer, of Marlborough; James O'Neil, alias, alias, of Cambridge; Timothy P. EVERETT HOME Robbed of $35

Edward Duffett, of 88 Swan street, Everett, told police today that burglars entered his home early today and stole two 110 bulbs and a necklace valued at $15.

The thieves gained entrance through the back door and smashed the kitchen door to enter the house. Duffett said.

Actor Jailed

Herbert R. Logan, an actor, was sentenced to 30 days in jail today by Judge John M. Gibbs in Suffolk superior court, after he pleaded guilty to having phoned in his Boylston street hotel room.

Smitty, Bay State Whaler, Goes Too Far in Eagerness to Catch Shark

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Boy, oh boy, have we got a yarn today! It's the story of Smitty the Whaler, who shipped out of Boston on the schooner Margaret in January, 1911, bound for the whaling grounds off the southernmost tip of South America.

Smitty's full name is Cecil C. Smith, and he lives at 509 West Elm Street, West Bridgewater.

He had half a dozen blood-curdling adventures on that cruise on the Margaret, but the one that gave him his greatest thrill is the one he is going to relate to us now.

On her way south, the Margaret stopped at Bridgetown in the Barbados to make some minor repairs. There they signed on a few West Indian sailors as members of the crew. Among them was a cabin boy who was quite an artist at handcraft, and Smitty and the lad became friendly.

When they got to the southern whaling grounds, they found the waters full of sharks. They swarmed around the ship eating up the dead whales so fast that the crew hardly had time to cut the blubber in.

It made whaling tough work, and it was a nuisance to the crew. Among them was a cabin boy who was quite an artist at handcraft, and Smitty and the lad became friendly.

They swarmed around the ship eating up the dead whales so fast that the crew hardly had time to cut the blubber in.

It made whaling tough work, and it was a nuisance to the crew. Among them was a cabin boy who was quite an artist at handcraft, and Smitty and the lad became friendly.

Smitty got a big kick out of catching those sharks. He was glad, too, to be able to help out his pal, the cabin boy.

But he had known the sort of jam he was going to get into over those shark-fishing activities of his—well—maybe he wouldn't have been quite so anxious to do it.

One morning, while Smitty was sitting on the midship hatch, trying the luck of the shore, the cabin boy yelled to him that there was a big school of shark alongside.

Smitty grabbed up a darting iron—a sort of short harpoon with a long rope attached—and ran across the deck to the side of the ship. The ship was moving along at a slow pace, and rolling considerably.

But Smitty wasn't thinking of the roll—he wasn't even thinking of his untied shoes, with the heels flopping around his heels. His mind was so full of sharks that he just didn't think of anything else at all.

He tied the free end of the darting iron's rope to a piece of the ship's rigging, jumped up on the rail and hurled his iron at a big fellow that was just breaking water below. And at that moment, everything seemed to go wrong.

The ship gave a lurch that threw him off balance. Shoes loose, tugging beneath his feet, prevented him from getting the balance back again.

Smitty went overboard—landed head first in the midst of that school of hungry sharks.

For a minute or two, Smitty was too stunned to think. He went down—down in the water, holding his breath by instinct, but doing nothing to bring himself back to the surface again.

Then he opened his eyes, and the sight he saw brought his wits back to him again.

The water down there is so clear that you can see for unusual distances, and everywhere that Smitty looked, there were sharks. Sharks to right and left. Sharks above him—sharks below him. Some of them were not three feet away from him.

And every last one of them had his nose pointed right smack in Smitty's direction.

Directly below him, Smitty could see a thin, metallic streak in the water. The darting iron. He grabbed for it—caught it.

Then with his eye on the sharks that were closing in on him, he began thrashing around in the water with all the strength in his body. Some people say a shark won't attack a moving object. Smitty didn't believe it, but it was the only chance he had.

Thrashing like a madman, he began mounting toward the surface. He still kept a firm grip on the darting iron, and now he could feel that someone aboard the ship was hauling in the rope to which it was attached. That might be a life-saver when he got to the surface.

The only chance he had now lay in a quick scramble for the deck of the Margaret—before the sharks got over their curiosity and began looking on him as just so much supper.

Suddenly, his head broke the surface. Now came the crucial moment. Would the shark make a last-minute dash for him—take off a leg or two before he could get "out of the water"? He kicked with renewed energy—an energy born of sheer panic—as the men on deck hauled him up.

He was half out of the water now—now only the calves of his legs were below the surface. Another heave, and he was out of the water. Safe—but so weak from fright—he almost let go and fell back into the water.

Back on the deck again, he stood, a man in a daze, until his shipmates' cries brought him out of it.

"For Pete's sake," they said, "go and look at yourself."

And when Smitty looked in a mirror, he hardly recognized what he saw there. "I was whiter," he said, "than anything I ever saw in my life."

All in all, Smitty is sorry he ever shipped on that doggone cruise. He'd have had a lot more fun, he says, if he'd stayed in Boston. He'd probably have had more adventures, too.

Because judging by the looks of the mail plenty of things are happening in the old Hub City. And I'm speaking particularly to the Boston boys and girls now, when I say that I want to see a story from every doggone one of you before the month is out.

I KNOW you've had adventures. Everybody has.

Tomorrow I'm going to harpoon a whale at a story-a-year contest run by Bobbie Mann of New York, N. Y. In the meantime—"That old

$10.00 EVERY DAY AND $100.00 EVERY MONTH is what Floyd Gibbons will pay American readers to prove that more thrilling and interesting TRUE adventures happen in YOUR life and in the lives of your friends than anything fiction writers can invent. And Floyd will prove it every day on this page. The famous war correspondent's own life is filled with adventure. He was wounded in "no man's land," torpedored in mid-Atlantic and rode with death in the Sahara, but he wants to write YOU the story now. Send it in to him today. There are no conditions. Everyone is eligible.

Who Said It?

"God helps them who help themselves." The name of Algernon Sidney (1622-1683), British soldier and executed revolutionary, will live forever because of this quotation even when his life's history is faded into oblivion. Concerning help, John Ruskin, who died in 1900, said: "Such help as we can give to each other in this world is a debt to each other; and the man who perceives a superiority or a capacity in a subordinate and neither confesses nor assists it, is not merely the withholder of a kindness, but the committer of an injury." And Cervantes, who wrote Don Quixote, said: "Heaven's help is better than early rising." However, "Use good sense to be certain you have 'heaven's help' before you ignore the timeclock." Isn't It So? Husband and wife often drive on a fifty-fifty basis. The wife tells what to do and hubby does it. Don't try to buy friends by gifts. When you give too much, such 'friends' will cease to stand by. Copy the ten battle-though up to its neck in hot water, it continues to sing.

Rubbing It In

Mr. Boston

$100,000 Handicap Alluring

By Jack Conway

I FIND myself getting a bit steamed up over the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap which will be run off on February 23 at Arcadia, Cal. I am even busy studying the dope sheets in an effort to pick the winner.

A $100,000 race was something to get excited about even in Boston times.

Mr. Charles Strub, owner of the Santa Anita track, was rated as a candidate when he offered this tremendous purse.

The boys and girls who are going to get the money for their next mutual ticket said it couldn't be done.

You can write back home that it can be done. The $100,000 race is going to be a grand success from a financial standpoint at least.

Dr. Strub may be one of those practical souls who won't worry as much about the race as he will over the box office count.

The good doctor has a rather acute business mind. It will cost $40 to secure one of the gates, and if you wish to sit in the box or take the sun on the clubhouse lawn it will be a few bucks extra.

It is expected there will be 50,000 cash customers, which means a gate of over $200,000.

With such a gate the doctor will have a new record. He will pay off the $100,000 purse. And the mutual take will run high on the day of the big race.

I understand the Santa Anita track has been making money grand a day and that it will end up with a profit of about $400,000 for the meeting. This is my idea of a fair return on an original investment of $100,000.

EKKIE CHOICE

THE FORM players have made the great Equinox favorite in the early books.

The odds are 4 to 1. Cavalcade will be a close second in the betting with Aurora, Rich Glen, and Mr. Khayyam, Faren, Plean, Obervant, Rikaku, Twenty Grand, Time Supply, Tick and Tock, Top Row and Thomasville having fair backers.

Indianapolis, which was a sensation at Narragansett, is a 60 to 1 shot to win, 30 to 1 to place and 15 to 1 to show in the early betting. It will carry a heavy weight against 120 for Cavalcade and 130 for Equinox.

Jack Vestrop, who has starred as Narragansett and Lockdown, is expected to have the leg up on Cavalcade in the $100,000 classic.

Special trains will go from Florida and New York for the race.

DANNO'S PUNCH

REFERENCE Sam Smith is still talking about Danno O'Mahoney's terrific punching power.

It will be remembered that Danno opened a wound over Sam's left eye with one of his wallop following his bout with St. Nick.

O'Mahoney hit me no hard," said Sam, "that I was in a daze for several minutes. It was a glancing smash, and I landed flush it would have knocked me out."

Danno hit Rudy Dusk flush on the chin in their recent bout. Dusk's knees buckled and his eyes became blank. I thought he would pass out of the picture.

"O'Mahoney keeps his fist closed when he punches and throws the right hand off his shoulder. He doesn't make the mistake of pulling his hand back an inch before he lets it loose."

The Irish champion has improved in his wrestling. He is mastering the American style. Once he harnesses up to his tremendous strength, he will be one of the greatest wrestlers we have ever known."

RANDOM SHOTS

DANNO is back in Philadelphia after his visit to Michael MacWhirter, Minister of the Irish Free State to the United States.

JACKSON TIES LEAF'S ACE IN GOALS

By Associated Press

Apparently there is no such thing as catching Charlie (Chuck) Conacher and Harvey (Busher) Jackson, the Toronto Maple Leafs' scoring ace, in the battle for National Hockey League scoring honors.

Just when it appeared as one of the stars might make it interesting for the fans, they stepped up the tempo and piled away again.

Statistical referee, President Frank Calder, says Conacher leading scorer last year, leading the pack with 36 points six more than the second place player.

Conacher not only pulled away from his teammate and the remainder of the field but went into the lead with 19 goals in total goals each have scored 19. He led in goals with 17.

The leading scorers:

CONFLICT IN TECH DATES

Despite the conflict in dates, Henry McCarthy, Tech physical director, believes both the inter-scholastic basketball tournament and the New England championship wrestling matches will attract large followings on March 8 and 9 at Tech.

The basketball tournament will cover three days starting on the 7th at the Hancor. On the next day the wrestling tournament gets under way in Tech's other gym, Walker Memorial.

Tech has a fine chance to win the title by a year in the grappling contests. Three finalists of last year are back. Harold George, Arvid Madersian and Harold Oshy are the trio.

Licking in Street Fight Provides Incentive

As a Flyweight Enters Amateurs

AND JOINS RIP VALENTI STABLE FIRST NIGHT HE DONS GLOVES

By Sammy Fuller (As Told to Sam Cohen)

A licking in the streets of the North End started me on my boxing career.

But for this beating, I doubt if I ever would have become a fighter, or met Rip Valenti, who was my first manager.

At the time I was taking this beating on the sidewalk, I felt that I could kick the kid I was fighting. I was so sure of myself that I managed to sneak in a punch that almost floored my opponent. Yet, it was generally considered by the gang that I was a coward.

I tried afterwards to get another fight with the kid, but he refused me. Later he entered the amateurs. He was just about my size, so one day I got a second and snaked into a tournament at Chelsea in the kid who licked me had entered.

Sammy weighed only 105 pounds when this picture was taken. He had won 10 straight bouts in the 112-pound class.

PRESIDENT WILL SPEAK JAN. 30

By Universal Service
Washington, Jan. 22 (U.S.)—President Roosevelt will broadcast on the night of January 30 as a part of the program for the "birthday balls" to be held on that night.

The president today agreed to participate in the radio program of that evening for the purpose of expressing his personal thanks and appreciation to the thousands of people who have taken part in the birthday balls throughout the country.

The president was advised by these in charge of the arrangements that they already had organized 120 communities more than participated in the birthday celebrations last year.

Roosevelt's broadcast from his room at the White House at 11:35 p.m. on January 30 will be a live broadcast. It will be the first of the series of birthday balls to be held on that night.

30,000 12th-men can't be wrong!
At least that's the contention of Manager George Krenka of the Boston Braves. The team has been picked to win the National League pennant for four weeks to view "Man of Aran" sponsored by the United States Navy.

We urge you to vote the Fine Arts Theatre today. The first record breaking was a big success. You should see a letter in the name of the star portraiture.

Send your ENTIRE week's subscription to The About Faces Edition of the Boston Evening American. If you are successful in the Boston Evening American, you will receive a letter in the name of the star portraiture.

X-9-ERS Gay Birthday AIRING

30 MIN. RADIO CELEBRATION

By N. F. T.
When the usual "Hello, Hello, Out There" greeting comes through the air tonight (W.A.B.), it will be to salute "Secret Agent X-9" members all over New England and a peppy half-hour program follows, an extension of the regular 15-minute period heard on Tuesday evenings at 8:30 hereafter.

It will mean a very special birthday broadcast in a program, numerous talented members of the X-9 Club, who have been guest artists previously, will return to take part. All of which may be in the radio schedule under Boston Evening American auspices. There's a special "X-9" orchestra from the Burroughs New-England Foundation due to provide the melodic background.

BRIGHT BROADCAST
Girls and boys won't want to miss this radio event, since it will "sparkle from start to finish. Piano solos, singing, vocal groups, and a host of other talent will be in charge of Rhythm and Blues local "milk" girl, of the ivories.

Bill Robinson, the top-notch tap dancer, termed greatest of them all by many, moves into the Ben Hurian spotlight (WEI) to aid the "Old Maestro" with his other efforts at 8 o'clock tonight.

THURSDAY
Now to hear a bass solo, no less, by the brilliant Lawrence Tibbett, who interprets the vocal solo, "Invocation" from Gounod's dramatic opera "Faust" this evening, as slated (WEI) for 8:30 a.m.

SOUTH SAYS SETTING
Mrs. Lutz Anderson, prominent radio society woman and author, submits to an interview to be produced on the radio. The interview will be in connection with the "South Seas" which is arranged to occupy the 8:30 to 9:00 slot on the radio.

Best Tomorrow
3:30 A. M.—W.A.B.—Rhythm, a program of orchestra music.
11:00 A. M.—W.A.B.—Martha Lee's Cooking School, under the auspices of the Boston Evening American.

Best Bets Tonight

Curve of Activity Halted

By LEWIS HANBY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Jan. 22.—As suggested a week ago, the rising curve of industrial activity was checked last week, perhaps under the influence of the reaction in prices and uncertainty about the gold clauses.

There seems, however, to be no reason why the rise may not be resumed and continue without important interruption for another month or two.

It would not be surprising to find the pace of expansion becoming more moderate before long. The business is now nearing the peak attained in the preceding New Deal boom, and the spur in automobile and steel production is not likely to continue so sharply.

My P. V. line barometer has turned down slightly, indicating that the volume of goods coming to market has become large enough to reduce the intensity of demand. Subject to possible inflationary developments, commodity prices are therefore unlikely to continue the up slide.

But for the present, the industries which have been leading the industrial procession are going strong. Last week, steel output rose again, and now averages around 500,000 tons a week. The level at which some steel companies can make a little money. Automobile production, too, continued to expand.

There seems to be some possibility of labor troubles in both of these industries, but at the moment, the background, and may stay there.

Other industries show mixed conditions. Lumber manufacturing, for example, reporting a good gain last week, while cotton manufacturing weakened. Profit margins continue satisfactory in the latter.

Railway car loadings per day averaged lower last week than remained under a year ago. "Miscellaneous" and "forest product" loadings made gains, but grain, livestock, and merchandise (C. L.) loadings were very backward.

Despite some recovery toward the end of the week, commodity prices averaged slightly lower, mainly because of some gasoline price unsettlement.

In banking and finance, one notes that the "excess reserves" of the member banks made a new high record last week. This gain was due to gold imports and partly to government spending of "profits" made through devaluation.

Thus the inflationary bank deposits have grown again. Now bank deposits (checks drawn) seem to be increasing, and the turnover of deposits has gained a little. Chicago and New York banks last week also borrowed some money from their reserve banks. While it is too soon to say that the inflation has begun to take effect, the inflationary pressure is still present, and these facts are interesting reminders of what may happen later.

For the present, the chief effect is to make "money" plentiful, and to keep commodity prices and securities high. The gold clause "jitters" passed. At this writing, what is the chief effect? It is to make the "excess reserves" of the member banks make a new high record last week. This gain was due to gold imports and partly to government spending of "profits" made through devaluation.

axation Citizen Is Most Highly Taxed

By B. C. FORBES

Europeans, especially Britons, are fond of impressing upon us and upon the world that they are more heavily taxed than we are.

One motive for this line of propaganda should be obvious. They want to get out of paying their debt to us.

The time has come, however, to challenge the statements made and heretofore accepted usually without question.

One of America's recognized authorities on taxes who has been delving into the facts, tells me that American taxpayers pay substantially heavier amounts than British taxpayers and that the outlook is for still more burdensome levies on Americans.

He explains that the favorite maneuver of the British is to compare their imperial government collections with the total of the most collections and to leave out of account all the various other taxes which the British pay.

Whereas in Britain the taxes raised by local authorities are levied on the property of the imperial government, in our country the state levies are almost three times the federal taxes.

Thus you will see how misleading it is to take into the reckoning the total of taxes paid by the country by the central government. Our state and local taxes alone are more than double British total.

But the fairest basis of comparison is: What percentage of a taxpayer's total income is assessed by taxes? Last week, the BUREAU OF TAXATION, UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY, has published a list of the taxes paid by the average American family.

COME WHEREAS, THE TAX LOAD IN THE UNITED STATES IS MORE THAN DOUBLE THAT IN BRITAIN.

Now note that, unlike Britain, we are not balancing our budget. Our running behind billions of dollars a year. This shortage naturally will mean further burdens of taxation to meet interest, and presumably to pay off the public debt.

What was once a myth, and it is important to know, is that the British are not more heavily taxed than we are.

Traders in Cheerful Mood

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR

Wall Street didn't get the close decision, and won't have to worry about it for at least a week.

Right now it seems that the gold blue currencies are the only ones that are really agitated. Speculators are looking for a move.

Which brings us to the fact that which is raising the question of whether the boys are going to try to make money marketwise in the new year or so before the Supreme Court acts.

Word from the Potomac is that the administration is quite serious about the whole gold business.

And that its principal worry of the time being is how to increase the country's export trade.

PUBLIC Must Fight CRIME

OMAHA MAYOR URGES SPEED

By ROY N. TOWLE
Mayor of Omaha, Nebraska

Suppression of crime and the extermination of the racketeer and gangster, the gangster has become one of the major social, political and economic problems of this country.

Crime, as represented by the kidnaper, extortionist, bank robber and cold blooded murderer, has spread into every section of the land.

No longer are the rural communities and the small towns free from its blight. The operations of the racketeer and gangster are not confined to the large cities.

The campaign to crime, worthy as it is, will fail unless it has the support of the people. The public which pays the enormous cost of crime, must be aroused to its task.

Swift Trials Needed

Enforcement cannot be made effective, however, without the cooperation of all our law enforcement agencies. Federal, state and local law enforcement agencies must coordinate their activities and combine their efforts.

The Department of Justice operates, under the leadership of J. Edgar Hoover, has been doing a splendid job in breaking up criminal gangs and sending kidnappers and murderers either to the penitentiary or to their graves.

Judges, juries, prosecuting attorneys and police must be protected against the influence of those who are interested in protecting the criminal.

Swift and inevitable punishment for crime is the thing that will drive the criminal out of business. It is not enough to catch a racketeer or gangster.

Actions of the courts ought to be speeded up. Trial should follow swiftly after capture.

If local, state and federal officers, in co-operation, will carry out an unrelenting campaign against crime, if prosecuting attorneys will vigorously prosecute those accused of crime, if juries will refuse to be swayed by pleas of insanity or plea of insanity, if the public will stand firm behind the law enforcement agencies we will soon exterminate the criminals who now prey upon society.

KARPIS KIDNAP CAR FOUND

By Associated Press.
Detroit, Jan. 22.—The automobile that Alvin Karpis and his companion, Harry Campbell, took from an Alton, Pa., physician yesterday was found abandoned near Monroe, Mich., today.

The motor of the car still was running.

The car apparently had been headed toward Detroit when Karpis and Campbell, last members of the notorious Karpis-Barker gang, accused of the Bremer kidnapping, abandoned it.

The car was taken from Harry Karpis after the pair abandoned his Quakerette limousine, and forced him to drive them into Ohio. Dr. Hunsicker was then left behind near Wadsworth, O.

WHEELER SUICIDE
Says His Fiancee

Hazel Orlowski, 29, testified in federal court today she was present with Raynor Kivela, 25, a farm hand, when Charles Wheeler, 32, shot himself at his farmhouse in New Ipswich, N. H., December 30, 1933.

Miss Orlowski was a witness for the New York Life Insurance Co., which is being sued by Mrs. Elizabeth B. Wheeler, widow of Charles Wheeler, for $5,000.

Wheeler died a suicide, said the girl, who testified there was an "understanding" between them on marriage.

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO C. C. PINCKNEY

JULY 8, 1796.

"It is a fact too notorious to be denied, that the greatest embarrassments under which the administration of this Government labors, proceed from the counteraction of people among ourselves, who are more disposed to promote the views of another nation than to establish national character of their own."

IT IS TIME TO GET OLD GLORY OUT AGAIN

WHAT this nation needs is a lot of old-fashioned patriotism. Some of our children are learning Communism in the schools when they should be concentrating on the original, rugged principles of American independence. Some of our statesmen are seeking a lesson in intrigue in a defunct World Court when they should be studying the costly lesson of the recent war debts availed.

Between the growth of Communism within our gates and the growth of our government meddling in affairs outside our gates, we have all but forgotten the flag in the attic. Let's get Old Glory out and dust it off, and bend it to the halyards and send it aloft in the breeze.

It's still Red and White and Blue, with Stars and Stripes. It still looks better than the red rag of the Internationale and all the flags of Europe.

It's still a grand flag and so is "the Republic for which it stands—one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

It's just that we had forgotten.

THERE is a bill before the Legislature to make compulsory, in every schoolroom in the state, a daily display of the Stars and Stripes, and a daily pledge of allegiance by pupils and teachers.

No truly American voice will be raised against it. It may be said that it is to our shame such legislation should be required, and that that will be true.

But is it required, and is it a good bill and it should be passed. New York has already enacted a similar one. This is an attempt at compulsory patriotism.

There is no such thing.

Patriotism cannot be legislated into existence. This is an attempt to revert to the fundamental teachings of the stalwart fathers of this country.

Those teachings inspire the patriotism we need. Boys and girls used to be proud of being patriots. They never were embarrassed by an expression of love for flag and country.

Today, in the adolescent pretense of sophistication begotten by our departure from sound ideals, patriotism is scarce. We still have young patriots but they are afraid to admit it. Why?

Because we have neglected, in government and education, the teachings of the forefathers who brought the United States into being by their everlasting glory.

LET'S GET THE OLD FLAG OUT AGAIN.

'Protecting' Cape Cod Two Points of View

Governor Curley wisely sponsors the plan for establishing a National Guard camp at Bourne.

The opposition from certain quarters on Cape Cod makes much noise, but there is no evidence that it is representative. Some of the protesting parties claim a National Guard camp would harm the Cape as a region of "recreation and peaceful beauty in winter."

There is a National Guard camp in the midst of the Rye and Hampton beaches in New Hampshire. It has never disturbed anyone.

Our National Guardsmen are GOOD CITIZENS.

We need more like them.

Cape Cod doesn't need to be "protected" against them. Cape Cod and the rest of the nation may some day be glad to call on these young men for PROTECTION!

Just Works of Art Those Painted Nails

We have it on the word of a professor at Brown that Mihady's painted fingernails and her plucked eyebrows are intended to be just works of art.

And the same judgment goes for the misses' hair that suddenly changes color.

The authority is Professor C. J. Ducasse, who challenges the idea that these so-called "beauty aids" are intended to make members of the fair sex look younger.

"They're not to deceive, but to delight," is the New Thought. And it sounds plausible. We believe the professor has scored a hit.

Dream of Progress It Will Come True

President Roosevelt is reported backing the creation of regular dirigible passenger service over both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

But it was President Paul W. Litchfield of the Goodyear company who first conceived the idea.

That was even before he attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, before he had begun his business career, which has included the building of dirigibles.

Mr. Litchfield's idea is said to have come to him when he was a boy, sailing play-boys on Dorchester Bay.

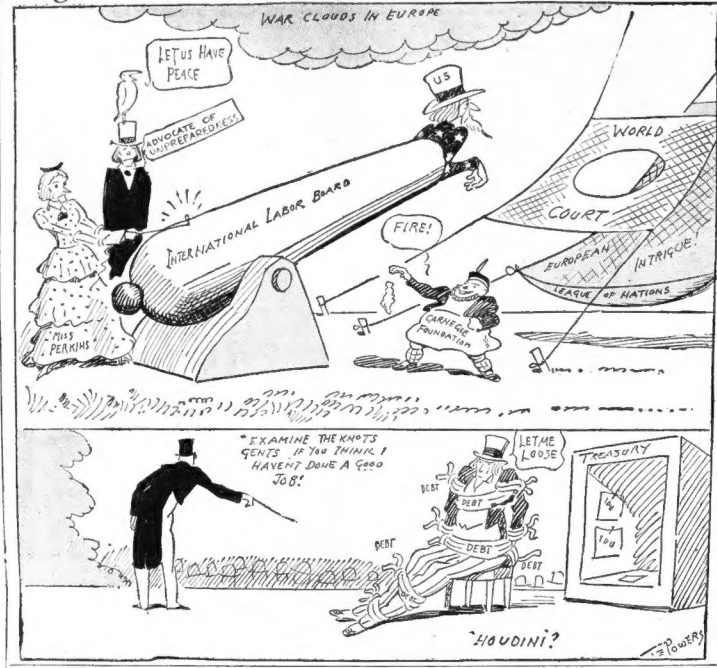

And now the dream is coming true.

We think ALL man's dreams will progress while some day come true.

Socialized Medicine

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARTS METROITONE NEWS

It seemed to me that the reporters missed one interesting thing about Dr. Alan H. Hefner. No matter what you may think of socialized medicine, the fact is that the Dr. Hefner is a man of creative efforts. It is a ruthless and stupid. One thinks Herbert Hoover may have been reading Nietzsche when he wrote his first treatise on liberty. Nietzsche was a mad philosopher.

His blasting critique of the state is pertinent at a moment when everybody, from the Dionne babies to the U. S. Steel Corporation, is caught in the lasso of personalized, as against individualized social controls.

The battle over socialized medicine is just one facet of the world struggle. One zone of the deep and if he tries to do anything more than merely report this encounter.

We had a highly individualized government in the reconstruction period after the Civil War when the railroad kings were bribing Congress and looting the country. And now, as many an alarmed citizen will tell you, we have a dangerously individualized government in Washington's entrenchment in private business in the federalization of countless concerns which need to be left to themselves in our traditional free-for-all.

While there was no definite commitment to the socialization of medicine, there is a front acceptance of the fact that some kind of group medicine is inevitable.

The problem seems to be how to get the power of an enlightened state behind average individual health in a front-out, dehumanizing, red-stepping and struggling with red tape the great profession of medicine.

Odd it seems that the two great dangers of the moment should concern the Lindbergh baby that was lost and the five Dionne babies that were saved. These five human mice crowded the deprecating war and rumors of war, off the front page.

As usual, the front page seems to say that Life is Life.

This might be worth remembering when we settle the problem of socialized medicine, which we probably will do before the little Dionne girls have babies of their own.

"Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."—St. John xv, 27.

A Woman's Best Years

"No woman is ever too old to be a complete human being." Whang—like the clang of the state's bell, that statement catches you up, heaves you into the arena of Dr. W. B. Began. Wolfe's new book, "A WOMAN'S BEST YEARS," is a volume that is not only a treatise on life, but a treatise on life. It is a volume that is not only a treatise on life, but a treatise on life.

And you'll have to do some mighty fast fancy foot and flat work if you expect to emerge with the best receipt.

You've hit the Frantic Forties—yet! Just yesterday you heard some flip young, thing carelessly refer to you as "that funny old Amy Brown."

Last night you gazed for long, desperate moments at that face before you were accepting an unchance. To you there has been no change and but face in the last fifteen years. Or hardly any.

CAN'T YOU SEE?

A little plumper, perhaps. Need more makeup, maybe. Skin not quite so good, eyes not quite so snappy. But aside from the trifles, the same Old Girl looked at you.

Then why, WHY, should they call you "old"? Why, WHY, should the world suddenly shun you? You cried yourself to sleep thinking about it. And today you're sick and terrified with that All Through Feeling—Old—!

You'll die rather than face it. Oh, if someone would only tell you that you are as good as dead, cheer you up, comfort you!

Very well, we'll answer to your prayer. Wanting someone to tell you that you're "old"? Dr. Wolfe will do it. All give you every consolation you can get. BUT PREPARE YOURSELF!

A SILVER PLATTER. YOU CAN still be a "complete human being," wise and vital, eager and reckless, amusing and attractive. BUT IT WILL BE UP TO YOU!

Here, surely, is the frankest book ever written about women and the utter truth about a period and the problem which are still to be mentioned—yet which will, like the portals of hell, for every woman when she passes her fortieth year.

Things every woman has wanted to ask—and no woman has dared to admit. And never was such a record more needed. Never before in human history has existence been so marvellous as it is today to middle-aged women. In the thirty years which lie between them and their childhood training, life has speeded up, tangled up more than in any preceding 300 years.

And for that sudden swiftness and pressure, most of them have had absolutely no preparation or training. They still can retain their place in the heading rush if they know the answers. But who will give them? This book will. But after that, I repeat, it's up to the woman herself.

TRAGEDY HOME-MADE

Nine tenths of your fears are all in your eye, says Dr. Wolfe in substance. Nine tenths of your tragedy is home-made—and the cockeyed superstition—and deliberate, personal, consciousness. Why are you "old" today? cowardice and conceit and self-judgment. You've been letting yourself be old since you were a child.

SO NOW IT'S UP TO YOU TO MEET YOUR OWN FATE! TAKE THE COUNT! Over forty! Life may be a rich and exhilarating adventure—or a fretful fade-out. Take your choice!

There are the hard-hitting facts. If you can't take them—if you must have your life in a cocoon—then this book is not for you. But if you really want to go on living—if you want to continue to be a COMPLETE woman—here are the rules, sister. Strap on the gloves and LEAP IN!

Words of Wise

An idler is a watch that lacks both hands. As useless if it goes as it stands.—Covper.

Prefer knowledge to wealth, one is transitory, the other perpetual.—Socrates.

Learn to understand your own nature, especially your own moods.—Euripides.

Mr. Tugwell

By BENJAMIN DECASSERES

BEFUDDLEMENT!

No word more precisely describes the mental floundering of the sanhedrin of professors who hatch the word-eggs of the "new order" in Washington.

There is nothing courageous, well-defined or creative in the books, pamphlets or the verbose proclamations of these professorial and professional rigmoraleans.

Now and then they flutter around the red flag of Communism. When they feel they are in danger of getting politically scorched, they blithely trip away to the frog-pond of near-Socialism.

Here, comfortably squatted, they croak "rugged individualist," "capitalist" and "Tory" at the self-reliant, aggressive, self-made Americans who pass by.

These horn-rimmed nunkey-donkeys of the New Deal are already immortalized by what they do not know.

Their thoughts hop around pathetically on their flypaper brains.

Their muckling political views prevent their pany ideas from taking root.

Hence they have no historical sense, no knowledge of men at first hand, no psychological penetration and no sense of any kind except in the financial rewards of publicity and that their jobs MAY some day be turned into a soft life-Communism.

BEFUDDLEMENT!

Or all the hopelessly befuddled minds of the "new order" Rexford Guy Tugwell, Deputy-Commissioner of the Department of Agriculture, seems to be most muddle-headed.

His sheer nonsense. Nothing is by the year-and-a-half of the right-wing-left-wing-no-wing man, of the high-diddle-diddle-jump-over-the-fiddle, the phony-balcony young man.

One has but to read his latest Under the New Deal to see "The Battle for Democracy" to see plainly that the grand junta of Brain-Trusters is very like Rexford Guy Tugwell, Deputy-Commissioner of the Department of Agriculture, seems to be most muddle-headed.

His sheer nonsense. Nothing is by the year-and-a-half of the right-wing-left-wing-no-wing man, of the high-diddle-diddle-jump-over-the-fiddle, the phony-balcony young man.

BEFUDDLEMENT!

Listen to Mr. Tugwell: "What the old order describes as 'rugged individualism' meant the concentration of power in the hands of the few." ONE OF THESE "FEW" IS REXFORD GUY TUGWELL.

The "old order" and "rugged individualism," which he despises, build the dozen or so universities from which Mr. Tugwell drank at the bubbling fountain of Engels and the other Czars of Collectivism.

It was the "old order" and "rugged individualism" that made possible Mr. Tugwell's job of Deputy-Commissioner of Agriculture, with its emoluments and the revenues he derives from his royalty-laden proclamations.

If the "old order" meant, as Mr. Tugwell says, "the regimentation of the many for the benefit of the few," THEN WHY HAVE THE WORKING CLASSES OF ALL THE WORLD BATTERED AT OUR DOORS FOR ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS? WAS IT TO BE EXPLOITED AND ENJOINED?

The "old order" and the "rugged individualism" of

THE working classes of America are literally dragged upward when the few prosper by the incalculable loss of supply and demand.

Besides, where have ninety-nine per cent of Mr. Tugwell's "few" come from in America? They have risen because of the RUGGED INDIVIDUALISM and their SUPERIOR COMPETENCE right out of the ranks of the "old order" and "rugged individualism."

And who is to "operate" these "institutions" for the benefit of the many?

Why, of course, Rexford Guy Tugwell and the rest of the vast army of mind-befuddled "new order" mandarins, who only wait the signal to doff their made of "democracy" and turn to the duped "many" the face of Lenin.

Stars and Stripes

Maybe Boston's "underprivileged men" are those who never get more than a strap on the Elevated.

A lot of former "white collar" men can't pay the laundry bills any more.

A Boston stationery says most married women live longer than their husbands. But the widows always do.

The Blue Eagle from Egg to Ground. "The Egg Johnson men" say they know how to get things when an egg hits the ground.

An automobile manufacturer says the country is getting on its feet. They'll be getting on it, if he rides in the subway.

Foot feelings are being made of "Millsville after the war" for "longer" when we discard "it."

The man who wants to buy a duck won't be able to find one if he tries to do it without this "Vanishing American."

Things are getting brighter. Street lights have been resumed at Millsville after a lapse of two years.

More public men have been captured. They'll get their numbers later.
